In Search of Air: Growing Up Dyslexic

Wednesday, April 16th at 7:00 p.m.

RMHS William E. Endslow Performing Arts Center

Don't miss this moving one-hour performance based on her experience growing up with a learning disability. In this unique presentation, dancer, choreographer, spoken word artist, and educator, Lida Winfield shares the gift and heartache that accompanied her struggle to read, which did not occur until her early twenties. This innovative performance is a mixture of funny, sad, and ironic vignettes woven together in a creative and captivating format that explores the issues of disability, access, and the value of hands on learning. Lida's presence on stage clearly expresses her life experiences in order to bring us closer to our own and to those of the students in our schools. Please join us for this community presentation!

About Lida Winfield . . .

Lida Winfield has performed her entire life and has taught and performed dance, theater, and storytelling nationally and internationally since 2000. As a young woman with dyslexia, performing artist, and educator, Lida is also an ardent believer in and practitioner of the use of integrated arts as a learning tool. Her solo works are deeply personal and yet startlingly universal, impacting audiences of all ages. Her poignant performances invariably cause her audience to laugh and cry, sometimes simultaneously. Lida is currently touring her performance In Search of Air: Growing up Dyslexic to many universities and education conferences around the country. Lida has a Master of Fine Arts in Interdisciplinary Arts from Goddard College. For more information please visit www.lidawinfield.com.
